The cinematic visual ties a gripping narrative to the tune. In the clip, The Vampire Diaries star Michael Malarkey and actress Veronica Oliver engage in an emotionally charged torrential romance marred by addiction, violence, and various ups and downs against a backdrop of decaying Rust Belt Americana. This turbulence remains soundtracked by the single’s gliding production and powerhouse vocal performances from both Walker and multiplatinum superstar Zara Larsson. The lyrics prove equally compelling and catchy.

Written by Walker, along with UK songwriting powerhouse Steve Mac (Leave A Light On) and Chelcee Grimes, “Now You’re Gone” stands out as the latest single from the chart-topping troubadour’s latest full-length, What A Time To Be Alive, which bowed at #1 in the UK and James Corden enthusiastically christened as “brilliant.” A standout from the project, “Just You & I” has been certified platinum in the UK, holding in the UK Top 10 singles chart for 11 consecutive weeks. The track also continues to stay in the Top 5 on the UK Airplay Chart, where it peaked at #1. In the U.S., it is currently raising up the airplay charts, while also heating up at Hot AC radio and Top 40 radio.

He recently launched a sold out tour across the UK and will be performing at Glastonbury on both June 27 and June 30.

Next up, Walker returns to U.S. soil for a much-anticipated nine-date North American tour this summer. It begins Wednesday July 24 at Lincoln Hall in Chicago, IL, visits major markets on the East Coast, and closes out Tuesday August 5 at Music Hall of Williamsburg in Brooklyn, NY. The tour also includes a stop in Montreal, Canada for Osheaga Festival on August 2.
