

WOLF ALICE

UNVEIL B-MOVIE INSPIRED 'YOU'RE A GERM' VIDEO

PREMIERED TODAY ON THE FADER

Wolf Alice have premiered their new music video for their track 'You're A Germ' today via The Fader. WATCH HERE.

Directed by Chris Grieder and inspired by b-movie and early grindhouse films, the clip captures the song's whispered menace and the band's effervescent personalities from the off; seeing the quartet alone in a wooden cabin, planning their survival routes out of various horror clichés.

Wolf Alice stated, "We are big fans of horror movies; terrified of them no doubt, but massive fans all the same. We always buy one on the road to watch together on long drives. We have figured out who will die first in the zombie apocalypse that is undoubtedly gonna happen. Joff can do a brilliant leather face from Texas chainsaw massacre impression and it was only a matter of time before we made our own."

Their stunning debut album, My Love Is Cool, is racking up acclaim across the globe with NPR saying, Wolf Alice is a band (...) whose crunchy, decidedly rock-oriented reinvention is steadfastly unthreatened by a catchy pop melody, a sweet, thoughtful harmony or an earworm bridge and chorus."

The London quartet recently performed their rousing first single "Moaning Lisa Smile" on The Late Late Show with James Corden (LINK), and on CONAN earlier this summer (LINK). Wolf Alice's new US single "Bros" (VIDEO LINK) is about to impact Alternative Radio and the band is poised to return to the US in late September for their nearly sold out headlining tour which includes a stop at Austin City Limits in October.
