TELL ME I’M PRETTY* WINNER OF 2017 GRAMMY® AWARD FOR “BEST ROCK ALBUM”

(New York - July 25, 2017) This morning, GRAMMY® Award winner Cage The Elephant premieres the live performance video for their song "Rubber Ball," featured on their forthcoming album UNPEELED, via Rolling Stone. The song, which originally appeared on the Cage The Elephant's 2011 album Thank You, Happy Birthday, was recorded live at their sold-out, hometown show at Nashville's Ryman Auditorium, and you can watch it here. Matt Shultz, lead singer, tells Rolling Stone: "We recorded this at The Ryman. It was always a dream of ours to perform at this hometown venue and we felt something spiritual from the moment we stepped on stage. The song 'Rubber Ball' Daniel and I wrote in our first band house. It's about excess in all aspects. It's about trying to gain control and not being able to but having love in your heart."

Cage The Elephant will release UNPEELED worldwide on July 28th via RCA Records. The new album was recorded over a series of intimate shows in cities including Los Angeles, Washington DC, Knoxville, and Nashville where the band performed in a stripped-down arrangement with a string quartet and additional percussion. UNPEELED features twenty-one tracks: eighteen curated songs from their past four albums plus three reimagined versions of existing songs. Said front man Matt Shultz about the inspiration behind the album: "Many times you're adding sonic layers looking for something to hide behind, and what you don't realize is that that vulnerability and that nakedness might be the most compelling and interesting thing about the song." Preorder the album here.

Cage The Elephant have previously premiered their music video for “Whole Wide World,” featured on UNPEELED, on Consequence Of Sound. Recently, Cage The Elephant also appeared on “Late Night With Seth Meyers” to perform the UNPEELED versions of “Whole Wide World” and “Too Late to Say Goodbye”.
