About Bleachers

Bleachers' sophomore album Gone Now was released on June 2nd, 2017 on RCA Records. The first single off of the album, “Don't Take The Money” (Click HERE to watch the music video), hit #3 at Alternative Radio. The band performed the song at the outdoor stage on Jimmy Kimmel Live!, on The Tonight Show Starring Jimmy Fallon (Click HERE), and most recently on The Ellen DeGeneres Show (Click HERE). Bleachers also appeared on NPR's Tiny Desk Concert Series where they performed stripped down versions of "Everybody Lost Somebody", "Don't Take The Money", and "Foreign Girls" (Click HERE to watch).

Ahead of the album release, The New York Times put out a glorifying profile piece on Bleachers' front man, Jack Antonoff. The article, which appeared in the Sunday edition of the paper, states that the band's new music is "anthemic, life-affirming pop-rock". Click HERE to read.

About Jack Antonoff

Jack Antonoff is a three-time Grammy® Award-winning singer, songwriter, musician, and producer, as well as the creative force behind Bleachers. After serving as lead guitarist in multi-platinum band fun., Antonoff launched his solo project Bleachers in 2014 with the critically acclaimed debut album Strange Desire. The album found him setting emotional meditations on anxiety, depression, and loss against a backdrop of earworm melodies and massive choruses on songs like the gold-certified "I Wanna Get Better" (which topped Billboard's Alternative chart) and the #3 Alternative radio hit "Rollercoaster." Antonoff toured the world for a year and a half in support of Strange Desire, building a cult fan base for his cathartic, suburban influenced anthems.

In addition to his work with Bleachers, Antonoff is an in-demand songwriter and producer for other artists, including Taylor Swift (he co-wrote and co-produced three songs on Swift's Grammy®-winning album 1989 including "Out of the Woods", along with her recent single "Look What You Made Me Do"), Sara Bareilles (co-wrote her Grammy®-nominated hit "Brave"), Zayn (co-wrote and produced his No. 2 Hot 100 duet with Taylor Swift, "I Don't Wanna Live Forever"), Lorde (co-wrote and co-produced her new album Melodrama), worked with P!nk and St. Vincent on their new albums, as well as with Sia, Tegan & Sarah, Carly Rae Jepsen, Troye Sivan, Grimes, and more.

Antonoff also founded and curated the annual "Shadow of the City" music festival, which takes place in Antonoff's home state of New Jersey in the parking lot of the Asbury Park Stone Pony. In addition, this year Simon & Schuster will publish Antonoff's first book, Record Store — a heavily illustrated anthology of essays, interviews, photographs, and ephemera that will pay tribute to the cherished and endangered cultural institution.

Antonoff is also a passionate advocate for Planned Parenthood and LGBTQ rights, having collected signatures from 142 high-profile artists, writers, and creators to deliver a message to legislators in Texas considering anti-LGBTQ laws. He is a co-founder of The Ally Coalition (TAC), which encourages allies of the LGBTQ community to take action for LGBTQ equality and support its causes. TAC has raised hundreds of thousands of dollars over the last few years for local LGBTQ homeless shelters around the US.
