NASHVILLE, Tenn.—Critically acclaimed singer-songwriter Tenille Townes’ powerful and inspiring music video for her new song “Girl Who Didn’t Care” is available to watch now.

Watch it HERE.

Townes’ vision for the new music video is to inspire young girls to always chase their dreams, no matter how hard or how distant they may seem.

To help bring Townes' vision to life she tapped Mason Dixon to direct the video and enlisted the help of three real-life 'girls who didn't care.'

"I am so excited about this music video and honored to have Alyssa, Sarah, and Shannon be a part of it," says Townes. "It was incredible to see the idea for this video come to life with all of them in it. I believe it's a really powerful thing to see real people living out real stories of chasing their dreams. It's what makes a dream seem like a possible thing. I hope when people watch this, they feel inspired to chase their own dreams."

Appearing in the music video alongside Tenille Townes is Sarah Fuller who last year (2020) was the first woman to play, and score points, in a Power Five College Football game when she stepped in as a place kicker for Vanderbilt University.

Alyssa Carson spent her entire childhood attending space camps around the world and is the only person to have attended every space camp offered. In addition, Alyssa was selected as one of seven ambassadors representing Mars One, a mission to establish a human colony on Mars in 2030.

Shannon Wells decided to go into public service at a young age when her grandfather told her about his time in the military. Today Shannon is a firefighter in Nashville, Tennessee. She was one of two females in her training class.

Townes wrote "Girl Who Didn't Care" with David Pramik and Steph Jones, and it is available via Columbia Nashville in partnership with RCA Records.
