September 8, 2021 – Today, multi-platinum selling superstar G-Eazy has revealed the release date for his highly anticipated fourth studio album These Things Happen Too, arriving September 24, 2021 via BPG/RVG/RCA Records.

The announcement comes alongside an album teaser trailer featuring a brand-new track aptly titled, “The Announcement” – watch the video & listen to the song HERE. The hard-hitting anthem marks a triumphant return to the artist’s hip-hop roots and signature flows, with cheeky lyrics detailing his evolved rockstar status, as G confidently steps into the booth to deliver the sequel to his 2014 album These Things Happen.

The long-awaited album will showcase G’s multi-faceted artistry with a diverse, yet eclectic body of work. These Things Happen Too highlights G’s growth since his debut LP, while also paying homage to it’s now classic and fan-favorite tracks. On “I, Me & Myself” G brings the album full circle, reflecting on the changes in his life and career since his first Top 10 single “Me, Myself & I” featuring Bebe Rexha. The album will also include the much-buzzed about unreleased song titled “Breakdown” featuring GRAMMY-nominated singer Demi Lovato, which was teased last month in a trailer for the new Netflix series “Titletown High.” The track has already racked up thousands of pre-saves, as fans eagerly await new music off of G-Eazy’s forthcoming album.

G-Eazy can be seen across the music festival circuit this Fall, with performances at BottleRock, Summerfest, Common Ground, and Breakaway Festival among others. For more information on G’s upcoming tour dates, please visit: <https://g-eazy.com/pages/tour>.
