Alongside an ever-growing touring schedule, this past weekend, Tenille hosted her 12th annual Big Hearts for Big Kids event in Alberta, CAN, raising over $450,000. At just 15, she started the concert fundraiser in her hometown to benefit her local youth shelter, The Sunrise House, raising over $2 million thus far.

This year’s event kicked off “Big Hearts On The Road,” a mini-tour set to hit Nashville on May 3rd at Exit/In on behalf of Room In The Inn, Dallas on May 12th on behalf of Midlothian Manna House, and Charlotte on May 14th on behalf of S.A.F.E. Animal Haven Rescue. Tenille took her event on the road to inspire people in their own hometowns to make a difference, where she’s partnering with fans at every stop to raise money for a cause close to their hearts. She brings her guitar and a heart for helping others and the fan brings their cause and a desire to make an impact in their community. Click here for more info and to purchase tickets.

Most recently, Tenille released the song “When’s It Gonna Happen” which will be featured on her forthcoming EP, as a response to an outpouring of fan support on social media to the track. With lyrics like “Sometimes I feel like I’m the last one standing / I look around and all my friends are falling in love,” it’s little wonder fans connected with the hope, insecurity, fear, and anticipation Townes brings to life through the driving track. Last month, Tenille performed the track on the Academy of Country Music Awards red carpet. Watch here.
